FIRE JUST AFTER JOKE-

Had Not Been Gone More than Two Hours When Blaze Startled Patrons of Waldorf-Astoria.

Mars al. P. Wi aer moved out of the house at No. 31 West Thirty-third street this morning. Two hours later a fire was discovered in the cellar.

There are conflicting reports as to the cause of the bianc. Some say that the boiler of the Alicer joke factory ex-Placed. Cances assert that while Wild-er has taking his stock out of cold storage in the cenar he dropped some jokes on the floor and that the poor overworked things were so enthused at being left behind that they bust into flames.

Because of the proximity of the house to the Waldorf-Astoria all of the fire appratus in the district was called out. The arrival of the engines caused a great exodus of fasmontbly dressed women from the luncheon rooms of the big hotel and an enormous crowd from Broadway and Fifth avenue impeded the progress of the firemen. The damage done by the flames was nominal; some say there was no damage inasmuch as few Marshall P. Wilder jokes were destroyed.

An aged woman became bowlldered in Herald Square fust as hose truck No. 26 came along on the way back from the fire. She was directly in the path of the plunging horses. The Ariver with of the plunging horses. The driver with rare strength and presence of mind swung his ponderous vehicle against an "L" road pillar, missing the old lady by about two feet.

The truck became so jammed that it took half an hour to remove it and Broadway cars on both tracks were blocked for half a mile. In the excitement the woman vanished.
